Call for submissions: Undergraduate and Graduate History Papers
Tufts Historical Review Seventh Edition

The History Society of Tufts University, in conjunction with the Tufts Historical Review Editorial Board and the Journal’s Board of Advisers, are delighted to announce a call for submissions to the Seventh Edition of the Tufts Historical Review, an academic journal of global history that seeks undergraduate and graduate papers of the highest caliber.

The Tufts Historical Review is one of the few undergraduate-led journals of its kind in the United States. A highly selective publication intended to recognize outstanding student work in history and the humanities, the Tufts Historical Review is distributed to the libraries of leading research institutions, including Harvard University, Brown University, Oxford University, the College of William and Mary, and Georgetown University. Alongside an active student board of undergraduate and graduate students, the Tufts Historical Review works closely in conjunction an advisory board including such renowned scholars such as Tufts University President Anthony Monaco.

This year’s theme is blood. Blood is a symbol ubiquitous in the study of history – family, mortality, warfare, medicine – blood binds them together like a thread through the course of human development. As a symbol of war, blood and iron bound Germany; and as a symbol of family, blood crowned King Henry VIII. In a more literal sense, Prince Alexei’s disease of the blood brought Rasputin to court, and Hippocrates’ theory of humors defined medical practice for centuries.

And these, of course, are just a few examples. The Tufts Historical Review Editorial Board seeks outstanding articles that explore our theme from a diverse array of perspectives.

The Tufts Historical Review is committed to publishing the finest in undergraduate and graduate research in history and the humanities. As such, we require that all submissions subscribe to the highest standards of academic quality. Failure to ascribe to the following requirements may result in the rejection of a submission to the Tufts Historical Review.

- All submissions must be cited in accordance with the Chicago Manual of Style, 16th Edition
- No submissions that have previously appeared in another publication will be considered eligible
- Submissions from both undergraduate (B.A.) and graduate (M.A., PhD.) students are welcomed
- Submissions should range between 2,500 and 8,000 words. Longer submissions are acceptable, but may be subject to editing by the Editorial Board of the Tufts Historical Review for purposes of brevity if selected
- Applicant’s name and information (including academic affiliation and contact information) should only appear on a cover page
- Please note that submissions need not explicitly reference the word “blood” to be eligible for consideration.

All submissions must be emailed to tuftshistoricalreview@gmail.com by November 15, 2014 for review by the editorial board of the Tufts Historical Review. For more information, please visit us online at http://asc.tufts.edu/pandp/historicalreview/index.html.

We look forward to reading your submission!

Emily Freedman & Brian Pollock
Editors-in-Chief, Tufts Historical Review 2014-15