Seminar Series

You are invited to attend our upcoming seminar:

“The Spaces Between Numbers: Getting International Data on Higher Education Straight” presented by Cliff Adelman

So you have no qualms about citing the latest International comparative data on higher education? They came from Mt. Sinai, after all. Think again. Data quality is problematic; critical demographic contexts are next to invisible; and, most importantly, the beauty-contest atmosphere ignores indicators that are at the core of national policies in post-industrial democracies. Concerned now? Join Dr. Cliff Adelman, senior associate with the Institute for Higher Education Policy, for a reflection on this landscape - it just might help you rethink what we mean by “accountability” in higher education.

(This seminar will be of interest to both practitioners and academics.)
