RESEARCH, TEACHING, AND COMMUNITY SERVICE: OVERVIEW

I am Associate Professor of Sociology in the Sociology Program, Department of Criminology and Sociology, in the School of Economic, Political, and Policy Sciences (EPPS) at The University of Texas at Dallas. I received my Ph.D. from Columbia University in Religious Studies in 1985; I was awarded a Ph.D. in Systematic Theology by Union Theological Seminary in New York in the same year.

I have published two book monographs on religion and social change; both books were published by the American Academy of Religion and are in the catalogue of Oxford University Press. The first book received grant support from Southern Methodist University. The second book was supported by a grant from the American Academy of Religion (Southwest Commission on Religious Studies) as well as Southern Methodist University. I was one of two primary authors and one of two co-editors of a third book, which was published by The Edwin Mellen Press. The last book was based on a U.S. Department of Education FIPSE grant. I was the PI for the grant project. The book grew out of a refereed, co-authored paper presented at a symposium on college educational opportunities for Hispanic students organized by The Civil Rights Project at Harvard University with support from the Pew Hispanic Center.

My single-author articles have appeared in Journal for the Scientific Study of Religion, Method and Theory in the Study of Religion, Journal of Ritual Studies, Semeia: Journal for Biblical Interpretation, and Listening: Journal of Religion and Culture. A co-authored article, for which I was the lead author, appeared in the Journal for Hispanic Higher Education. I have published book chapters—all as the single author—in edited books by Sage Publications, Inc.; Greenwood Press; Parthian Books; and Brill. I have published entries in two editions of The Encyclopedia of Religion, and entries in Encyclopedia of Protestantism and Encyclopaedia Britannica.

I teach courses on religion in U.S. society, religion in public life (a graduate course), religions in global societies, religion in international development, immigrants and immigration in U.S. society, immigration policy (graduate course), field research methods, qualitative research methods (a graduate course for all EPPS students), and qualitative research practicum, in which EPPS grad students conduct research for their dissertations and Master theses. I was Visiting Scholar in the Social Work Program in the School of Law at Guangdong University of Technology in Guongzhou, Guangdong Province, China, where I taught my UTD course, Field Research Methods, to social work students in May 2016.

I am a two-time recipient of the Student Choice Teaching Award presented by students in the formerly named School of Social Sciences at UTD, and have received the Outstanding EPPS Faculty Comet Teaching Award in Sociology (2015) and a Distinguished Teacher in Diversity and Multicultural Education Award (2014), which is presented by UTD's Office of Diversity and Community Engagement.

I currently serve on the UTD University Institutional Review Board (IRB) and the new UTD Interfaith Advisory Council. I have served on many other university-wide committees: Committee on Education Policy (CEP), which I served as Chair; the Committee on Core Curriculum (CCC); Committee on Student Scholarships, of which I was Vice Chair; and the Advisory Committee of the Office of International Education. I have been a member of the Sociology Program Committee in EPPS and the School's Committee on Teaching Effectiveness. As former Assistant Dean and College Master in the School of Social Sciences,

I served on the UTD Council of Masters, an administrative body. I have served as Faculty Advisor in UTD's Office of Undergraduate Education under the Dean of Undergraduate Education. I am Faculty Advisor to the UTD Sociology Club and Co-Faculty Advisor to the new UTD Chapter of Oxfam International. I have been long-time Faculty Advisor to the UTD Baha'i Club, and was Faculty Advisor to the UTD Intercultural Women's Society.

I am a member of Friends of Yale Institute of Sacred Music (Yale ISM) at Yale University, an advisory body appointed by the Director of the Institute. I am a member of the American Academy of Religion and a past member of the AAR's Ritual Studies Steering Committee.

AWARDS AND FELLOWSHIPS

- Coolidge Fellow
CrossCurrents: The Association for Religion and Intellectual Life
Research Colloquium, with cooperation by Columbia University and Union
Theological Seminary, New York, New York, July 5-28, 2006

This residency program allowed me to draft a journal article on the contribution of religion to Mexican immigrant women's leadership of their Pentecostal religious organizations and families, and how their leadership encourages assimilation into American society and its social institutions.

- Resident
The Rockefeller Foundation
Residency, The Rockefeller Foundation Bellagio Study and Conference Center
Bellagio, Italy, July 15-August 13, 2004

This competitive residency program allowed me to begin writing a book monograph on religion, Mexican immigrant Pentecostal women, their leadership of their church organizations, and assimilation.

PUBLICATIONS

Books

Co-Authored

- 2012 Barriers Faced by Hispanic Students Transferring from Community Colleges To University: An Ethnographic Approach. Bobby C. Alexander and Victor Garcia, Editors. Lewiston, New York: The Edwin Mellen Press. I am one of two principal authors of the book as well as one of two co-editors.

The book presents ethnographic findings on barriers Hispanic community college students encounter in transferring to the university. Beyond identifying and analyzing transfer barriers and making suggestions for policy and practice, the ethnographic findings generate a variety of concepts, contexts, and questions for future research. The book is based on a grant project funded by the U.S. Department of Education's Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education (FIPSE), titled "An Ethnographic/Social-Scientific/Community-Based Model to Recruit and Retain Hispanics." I was Project Director of the grant.

The purpose of the FIPSE grant was to address Congressional Priorities 12 and 13 (1998): retain Hispanic students enrolled in two-year colleges, transfer them to four-year colleges and universities upon the completion of the Associate degree, graduate them with a Bachelor from four-year institutions, and enroll more Latino students as majors in the sciences. The book is an expanded version of a paper I and my co-authors presented at the symposium on "Community Colleges and Latino Educational Opportunity" organized by The Civil Rights Project at Harvard University with support from the Pew Hispanic Center.

Monographs

- 1994 Televangelism Reconsidered: Ritual in the Search for Human Community. Studies in Religion Series, No. 68. Atlanta: Scholars Press (in the catalogue of Oxford University Press; originally published by the American Academy of Religion's press).

By framing the phenomenon within the context of viewers' ideological and social marginalization within mainstream U.S. society, the book calls attention to televangelism's attractiveness as an opportunity viewers discover to redress their marginality. Fundamentalist Christian viewers' ideology and morality differ from those of mainline Christians and of from mainstream society, which is historically committed to political, cultural, and religious pluralism. The book offers an analysis of the conflicting ritual uses of television religion by viewers to overcome their marginality that undermine these efforts: selflegitimation as a minority religious group, and adaptation of members of this group to a secularized U.S. society undergoing political, social, and cultural change.

- 1991 Victor Turner Revisited: Ritual as Social Change. Academy Series: Dissertation Series, No. 74. Atlanta: Scholars Press (in the catalogue of Oxford University Press; originally published by the American Academy of Religion's press).

The book offers an evaluation of Victor Turner's theory of "ritual anti-structure"—ritual stands in "dialectical relation" to social structure and, as such, is an agent of social change—applied as an interpretive tool to two examples of religious or spiritual ritual. The first is black Pentecostal ritual; the specific example is a well-known black Pentecostal congregation in Brooklyn, New York, engaged in political activism in that city. The second is the quasi-religious ritual of the highly influential counter-cultural experiments of Jerzy Grotowski's Polish Laboratory Theatre.

Work in Progress

Book Monograph

- Immigrant Mexican Pentecostal Women’s Church Leadership: Toward a Revised Theory of Religion and Women’s Empowerment

I currently am working on a book monograph and related journal articles using interpretive and critical ethnography to examine how Mexican immigrant church women from a traditional culture and religion who now reside in the U.S. assert their agency and institutional power in leadership of and/or engagement of their churches, families, workplace, and community organizations while maintaining traditional gender roles associated with these institutions. Such roles include less visible positions in their churches as minor leaders in worship, fundraising, and religious education of children, wife and mother, and gendered or female labor and community organizer. Structures of the workforce, along with paid income in the U.S., and of community organizations heighten opportunities for these church women to assert their agency and power. I also examine how leadership and/or engagement of these institutions encourages and contributes to assimilation of these church women into U.S. social institutions, and, through them, U.S. society. My study contributes to Development Studies a more nuanced understanding of mechanisms and processes through which women of color from traditional religions, cultures, and gender roles in developing countries, and those who migrate to developed ones, achieve institutional agency and power. These traditional, immigrant church women’s leadership enlarges or reconstructs concepts of women’s agency and institutional power, when Western feminist theory, which excludes women of color, cannot account for them. My research has been funded by the Rockefeller Foundation and CrossCurrents: The Association for Religion in Intellectual Life.

Journal Articles

- “Hispanic Metropolitan Migration Reconsidered: Reassessing the Housing Factor in the Case of Dallas County Texas, 1960-2000.” I am the second author after Victor Contreras, on whose dissertation committee I served. Euel Elliott and Karl Ho are the remaining authors.

My co-authors and I use a time-series model from census data to show available and affordable housing is a stronger influence than income on migration.

- “Putting Validation Theory into Practice: Addressing Transfer Barriers for Hispanic Students.”

This article builds upon the co-authored book above examining barriers Hispanic community college students face in transferring to the university and strategies to address them employed in the U.S. Department of Education FIPSE grant project (see grants received above). Drawing upon validation theory, I call attention to validating aspects of the different strategies employed in the FIPSE Project in order to address transfer barriers.

- “Immigrant Mexican Pentecostal Women, Church Leadership, and A Revised Theory of Religion and Women’s Empowerment.”

The article is a condensed version of the argument I make in the book monograph now in progress (see book in progress above).

RESEARCH GRANTS

Federal

- “An Ethnographic/Social Science/Community-Based Model to Recruit and Retain Hispanics”
Bobby C. Alexander, Project Director (PI)
U.S. Department of Education Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education (FIPSE)
September 1, 2003-August 31, 2004

The FIPSE grant was the largest grant ($600,000) ever awarded by the U.S. Department of Education at the time. As FIPSE Project Director, I secured a no-cost extension of the FIPSE grant by applying interest earned during the original period of the grant and tapping money that had not been expended during the original grant period.

The purpose of the FIPSE grant was to address Congressional Priorities 12 and 13 (1998): retain Hispanic students enrolled in two-year colleges, transfer them to four-year colleges and universities upon completion of the Associate degree, prepare them to graduate with a Bachelor, and enroll more Hispanic students as majors in the sciences.

U.S. Department of Education Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education (FIPSE)
September 1, 2002-August 31, 2003

I secured a second no-cost extension of the grant.

- “An Ethnographic/Social Science/Community-Based Model to Recruit and Retain Hispanics”
Rita Mae Kelly, PI; Bobby C. Alexander, Co-PI (from September 1999 to October 2001)

U.S. Department of Education Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education
(FIPSE)
September 1, 1999-August 31, 2002
$600,000

I assisted Dean Rita Kelly, the original FIPSE Project PI, in preparing the proposal for the FIPSE grant.

Other Federal Grant Activity

- U.S. Department of Education Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education (FIPSE) Migration and Gender in the Globalization Context Program

During the Fall 2004 semester, following the departure from UTD of Laura Gonzalez, Ph.D., the former Project Director of this second FIPSE grant project, I served as Project Director during the final phase of funding. Formerly known as the North American Mobility Project (NAMP), this international student-exchange program sent UTD students to The University of Guanajuato in Guanajuato, Mexico, and The University of Alberta in Alberta, Canada, and received students from these universities at UTD. I supervised a student from each of these universities during my term of office.

three-quarter salary

This leave allowed me to draft the book examining barriers Hispanic community college students encounter in transferring to four-year colleges and universities and strategies to address the barriers. While on leave, I completed follow-up interviews with clients and staff members of the Human Rights Initiative of North Texas (HRI) for the Asylum Research Project (see above).

I led a presentation by members of the UTD Asylum Research Project to the Director of The Overbrook Foundation in Fall 2008 that resulted in the renewal of the grant initially awarded by the foundation in 2007. All of the grants from the foundation were awarded directly to HRI, which dispersed the funds to the individual members of ART.

Donor Grant
The Dallas Women's Foundation
July 2004
$5,000

In the final months of the FIPSE grant, I led the successful effort by principals of the FIPSE Project to secure a donor grant from the Dallas Women's Foundation (DWF). The grant, which was awarded through UTD, funded the creation by former FIPSE Project principals of a new 501(c)(3) non-profit organization: the Oak Cliff Center for Community Studies (OCCCS). The OCCCS, which operated out of the physical site of the former FIPSE Project's ethnographic field station in Oak Cliff, continued and expanded the activities of the U.S. Department of Education's FIPSE Project (see above). As President of the Board of Directors of the OCCCS, I wrote and submitted grant applications to a number of foundations, including the Dallas Women's Foundation and the Harold Simmons Foundation.

The OCCCS cooperated with Mountain View College (MVC), UTD's institutional partner in the FIPSE Project, in providing instructional staff for a "Cultural Studies" course offered by MVC originally funded by the FIPSE grant. The OCCCS also made the ethnographic field station it operated available to train students enrolled in the course in ethnographic research. As the FIPSE Project had done, the OCCCS assisted students in applying to four-year institutions, applying for scholarships and other forms of financial assistance, and mentored the students and their parents as well as other members of students' families. The OCCCS expanded the mission of the FIPSE Project by assisting high school students enrolled in Dallas Independent School District high schools in Oak Cliff in preparing for and applying to two-year and four-year colleges and universities, as well as applying for scholarships and financial aid. The OCCCS included students' parents as participants in its programs and activities in an effort to engage them more fully in supporting their children's higher education.

Toward the close of the FIPSE grant, I was instrumental in securing a new, successful FIPSE grant from the U.S. Department of Education developed by administrators and faculty members in the Dallas County Community College District. Dr. Gonzalez and I approached and with whom we worked to develop a second grant application. The new grant built upon the FIPSE Project's community and family-based model.

- Visiting Scholar, Guangdong University of Technology (GDUT), Guongzhou, Guangdong Province, China. May 12-20, 2016.

I taught my UTD Field Research Methods course to Social Work students enrolled in the School of Law at GDUT. At the time Vice Dean of the School and Head of the Social Work Program, Jane Liu, Ph.D. recruited me.

I also gave two talks on Sociology and Social Work to two professional/governmental associations of social workers, one in Guongzhou, the other in Zhouzhou, Hunan Province, China, as part of the first ever conference of social workers in Hunan organized by the provincial government (May 18th).

2007-present

- Member, Friends of Yale Institute of Sacred Music (Yale ISM), Yale University

I am in my tenth year of service on this advisory board appointed by the Director of the Yale Institute of Sacred Music. I and my colleagues have advised the Director in revising the Institute's mission statement; creating an interdisciplinary, cross-cultural, global ISM Fellows program in Sacred Music, Worship, and the Arts and a related research center at the ISM; creating a gallery and performance space for sacred music and art at Yale sponsored by the ISM; launching the "Congregations Project," which brings practicing church musicians and church staff members to the Yale campus for a summer seminar; and, most recently, proposing a consultation to study how sacred music and the arts are currently integrated in worship and outreach across churches, and to use this integration to engage other religions and their congregations in greater mutual understanding and support in an increasingly diverse and pluralist U.S. society and culture.

- Presenter, Fourth Annual "Youth Summit and Diversity Dialogue" sponsored by Congresswoman Eddie Bernice Johnson.

Congresswoman Johnson invited me to serve as one of three North Texas university faculty presenters to the summit her office sponsors. I lead the forum for three groups of middle and high school youth on "Addressing the Need for Social Change." Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas. August 17, 2010.

2008-2010

- Member, With One Voice

This body is a coalition of public and government institutions, including Dallas County's Parkland Hospital, and non-profit organizations in North Texas providing a variety of services to immigrants in the region. The mission of With One Voice is to improve the lives of immigrants, regionally and nationally, by advocating for reform in immigration laws and policies affecting illegals, refugees, individuals seeking political asylum, children, and other immigrants.

I helped arrange a workshop for eligible legal permanent residents on how to apply on-line for citizenship sponsored by Catholic Charities of Dallas, Inc., the Dallas Chapter of the National Council of Jewish Women (NCJW), which is represented in With One Voice, the New Americans Campaign United for Citizenship, the International Rescue Committee (IRC), and Proyecto Inmigrante ICS, Inc. The workshop, which was held on the UTD campus on January 13th, 2013, was endorsed by UTD's Office of Diversity and Community Engagement. The Dallas Chapter of NCJW and Catholic Charities had received a grant from New Americans to hold the workshop in coordination with the other organizations.

2004-2007

- President of the Board of Directors, Oak Cliff Center for Community Studies (OCCCS); and honorary Lifetime Member, Board of Directors, 2007-present

At the conclusion of the U.S. Department of Education FIPSE grant, I and other FIPSE Project principals co-founded this 501(c)(3) non-profit organization in the Oak Cliff neighborhood of Dallas, Texas. The OCCCS provided a variety of programs and services targeting Latino high school and community college students and their families that prepared students to enroll in colleges in the Dallas County Community College District and transfer to bachelor's degree-granting institutions upon completing the associate's degree. As President of the Board, I secured three grants from the Dallas Women's Foundation, two from the Harold Simmons Foundation, and a TXU Electric grant.
