Romelia H. Flores

IBM Distinguished Engineer & Master Inventor

Talk Title: “Career Roadmap with a Cognitive Flair!”

Romelia Flores is one of IBM's top 500 technical executives, earning the titles of IBM Distinguished Engineer in 2008 and IBM Master Inventor in 2009. She has collaborated with some of IBM's largest clients around technology innovation, and holds 25 patents with an additional 26 patents pending. She has personally trained thousands of IBMers, and specifically focuses on early-career professionals from the Millennial Generation.

Romelia became a University of Texas alumnus 32 years ago, and a Baylor Honorary Alumnus in 2014!

In 2016, Romelia received a Lifetime Achievement Award at the Great Minds In Stem Conference. She will be receiving a Lifetime Achievement Award in October for her service and commitment to STEM.
