Provenance

This collection was given to the History of Aviation Collection in two gifts, the first in 1967 from George Haddaway and the second in 1977 from Vice Admiral Charles E. Rosendahl. It consists of papers, photographs, and newspaper clippings generated by, for and about Clara Adams. An avid philatelist, Mrs. Adams collected First Flight and First Day Covers, a chronological list of which follows. Because of her association with many aeronautical figures of inter-national distinction, mainly early women aviators, her photographic collection (1 box) merits a subject index in the register. A personal friendship with Dr. Hugo Eckener of Germany as well as passage on experimental and inaugural Zeppelin flights, such as the Graf Zeppelin and Hindenburg, led to her becoming a proponent of lighter-than-air travel. While in Germany, she obtained monographs on Zeppelins that are listed with these materials.

The personal papers include a box of biographical items such as a personal clipping file, the itinerary of her around the world flight, speaking engagements, and memorabilia. Manuscript materials relating to lighter-than-air flights are held in one box, while other speeches, broadcasts, and notes relating to powered flight are housed in another. Most, though not all, of her personal flight records and observations, particularly those of inaugural clipper flights, are stored with oversize materials. Because these are extensive, the journals and records are arranged in a separate list. Other materials in the papers include two boxes of folders, arranged alphabetically about aeronautical organizations such as Early Birds and Women's International Association of Aeronautics, aeronautical designers such as Earle S. Eckel (autogiro), and aeronautical events such as the dedication of the Floyd Bennett Airport.

The correspondence, contained in one box, is divided into incoming correspondence arranged alphabetically by writer, outgoing correspondence (1 folder) arranged chronologically, and correspondence about Adams (1 folder) arranged chronologically. Incoming letters comprise the bulk of correspondence.

Also among the personal papers are four boxes of associated printed materials. The newspaper clipping file is housed in two boxes, one arranged by subjects and the other by dates (1929-43, mainly 1939). The two remaining boxes hold articles from periodicals, journals, and newsletters. The subject of one box is aviation, which includes the newsletter of various airlines, whereas the subject of the other relates to the geography and inhabitants of the Pacific and South Pacific Islands.

The materials in the Clara Adams Collections span the years 1919 to 1967.
